Q: How to filter out specific dates from the collection in firebase? I'm trying to filter dates which are less than the current date. I'm using firebase. This is how I'm querying the date range in my firebase collection. `var currDate = moment().startOf('day'); currDate = currDate.toDate(); var startDate = moment(firebase.database.DataType.StartDate); startDate = startDate.toDate(); var endDate = moment(firebase.database.DataType.EndDate); endDate = endDate.toDate(); const timesRef = firebase.database().ref('/times');` `timesRef.orderByChild('StartDate').startAt(currDate).endAt(endDate).on('child_added', snapshot => { var start = snapshot.child('StartDate').val(); var end = snapshot.child('EndDate').val(); console.log(start + " + end); });` My collection looks like this in firebase. I'm trying to return all the times which are for the current day only. I tried several other methods like using `limit()`

Using a leaf : root ratio of 4.2 : 1, which is higher than that reported by Anderson and Genn \[[@B1]\], lead to a higher biomass on the LANDF plots. This biomass calculation did not take into account changes in nutrient status and would be inappropriate for follow on crops grown under the same conditions. In the LANDF project, biomass in the R, S, N and N+P experiments was calculated using a leaf : root ratio of 3.8 : 1. This is the original biomass ratio from which the LANDF project biomass estimates are based. The number of stems in the LANDF project was estimated using one of the methods for biomass calculation, and was used to derive the number of stems produced per hectare per annum. Using the full stem biomass per plant was based on the biomass from the original LANDF project and the biomass value for a four year old tree. The value for the four year old tree was calculated from the number of stems in the original LANDF project and the number of stems in the LANDF second stage. The LANDF trial reports that the above ground biomass was harvested in 2000, but the diameter at breast height (DBH) was measured in 1994. Therefore, the calculation for the four year old tree assumed that the biomass remains constant over the lifetime of the tree. The method to estimate the number of stems produced per hectare per annum was based on the number 2d92ce491b
