Majapahit Kingdom Eminent Personalities.. The Code For The Haqqana of Ogun Temple,Ibadan,Nigeria.pdf Q: Does Task.Factory.StartNew Return a Task? Does Task.Factory.StartNew Return a Task? The docs say it returns a Task, but I'm not seeing the Task() method anywhere. A: This has been confirmed by the author of Task: A Task is not a Func or anything like that - it is a type for which an underlying type (IList) is implemented. Edit: Since many developers like to use the Task() method to create a Task which is expected to be completed when the task is awaited, I think the best solution is to use this extension method: `public static Task CreateAsync(this T value) { return Task.Factory.StartNew(() => { try { return value; } catch (Exception ex) { return Task.FromException(ex); } }); }` A: No, it doesn't return a Task. The only thing it does is invoke a Task-returning function with a delegate object. That delegate object is not a Task. It's not clear to me why you think it should have a Task() extension method. If you want to make a Task that wraps a non-Task return value, then you can use Task.FromResult().

It is well established that the response to an antigen is determined by the ability of T cells to recognize peptides derived from proteins processed and presented on major histocompatibility complex (MHC) molecules by antigen presenting cells (APCs). It is also known that this recognition is dependent on the T cell receptor (TCR) interacting with specific peptide-MHC (pMHC) complexes. In this project we will investigate how the TCR recognizes pMHC complexes. The experimental approach will use biophysical
